

Tuebrook and West Derby children unveil mosaic to mark Queen's Diamond Jubilee

Unveiling of a Diamond Jubilee Mosaic at Lister Infants School, Tuebrook, by Author Nicholas Allan

A MOSAIC was created by Liverpool schoolchildren to mark the Queen's Diamond Jubilee year.

A MOSAIC was created by Liverpool school children to mark the Queen's Diamond Jubilee year.

Pupils from Holy Lodge girls' college in West Derby and Lister Infants school in Tuebrook joined forces for the special project.

Author Nicholas Allen, who wrote the book The Queen's Knickers, was on hand for the grand reveal at Lister infants yesterday.

Rachel Powell, community outreach officer at Holly Lodge, said: "The unveiling was the first time children from Lister infants had seen their work completed and their little faces just lit up.

"We are delighted with the end result - it looks fantastic. It was a great way to mark such a special occasion. The mosaic will be there for all to see forever."

(Liverpool Echo; June 2012)